Subject: Comments for tomorrow's SAP

Hi Jack,

It has certainly been a long day. Attached are USDA's comments for tomorrow's public comment period. I will bring 30 copies with me. I would have sent it sooner, but I had to make a few minor edits based on today's discussion and I arrived home in the last hour!

See you in the morning!

Sheryl

Ex. 6 - Personal Privacy The hearing for our Secretary is tomorrow - finally. A couple of items - any word on your chlorpyrifos decision? Any chance you could share as you go to court? Second, I understand you have a person, Dave Kruger, scheduled to present a three hour seminar next week on spray drift. Can you provide details? Jill has shared with staff, but I would prefer the invitation, if any, come from you. It may be intended to be an EPA-only meeting. Just checking first. I would also appreciate the agenda if USDA staff are included.

Thanks,

To the press contact at EPA:

I am a producer for the Today Show, working on a story for this Thursday morning on the pesticide "chlorpyrifos" and the controversy over its use on fruit and vegetable crops. Several environmental safety groups and researchers believe this pesticide is toxic and harmful to small children's developing brains and nervous systems.

I'd like to request an on-camera interview with a representative from EPA to be done today or tomorrow. If an on-camera interview is not possible, I'd like to get an emailed statement by 3PM EST tomorrow (April 5) to explain the EPA's decision last week to deny a petition that requested a ban of chlorpyrifos on all food crops in the United States.

My contact info is below. I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Robert Powell

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

March 29, 2017

EPA Administrator Pruitt Denies Petition to Ban Widely Used Pesticide

Today, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Scott Pruitt signed an order denying a petition that sought to ban chlorpyrifos, a pesticide crucial to U.S. agriculture.

"We need to provide regulatory certainty to the thousands of American farms that rely on chlorpyrifos, while still protecting human health and the environment," said EPA Administrator Pruitt. "By reversing the previous Administration's steps to ban one of the most widely used pesticides in the world, we are returning to using sound science in decision-making – rather than predetermined results."

"This is a welcome decision grounded in evidence and science," said Sheryl Kunickis, director of the Office of Pest Management Policy at the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA). "It means that this important pest management tool will remain available to growers, helping to ensure an abundant and affordable food supply for this nation and the world. This frees American farmers from significant trade disruptions that could have been caused by an unnecessary, unilateral revocation of chlorpyrifos tolerances in the United States. It is also great news for consumers, who will continue to have access to a full range of both domestic and imported fruits and vegetables. We thank our colleagues at EPA for their hard work."

In October 2015, under the previous Administration, EPA proposed to revoke all food residue tolerances for chlorpyrifos, an active ingredient in insecticides. This proposal was issued in response to a petition from the Natural Resources Defense Council and Pesticide Action Network North America. The October 2015 proposal largely relied on certain epidemiological study outcomes, whose application is novel and uncertain, to reach its conclusions.

The public record lays out serious scientific concerns and substantive process gaps in the proposal. Reliable data, overwhelming in both quantity and quality, contradicts the reliance on – and misapplication of – studies to establish the end points and conclusions used to rationalize the proposal.

The USDA disagrees with the methodology used by the previous Administration. Similarly, the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture also objected to EPA's methodology. The Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (FIFRA) Scientific Advisory Panel (SAP) also expressed concerns with regard to EPA's previous reliance on certain data the Agency had used to support its proposal to ban the pesticide.

The FIFRA SAP is a federal advisory committee operating in accordance with the Federal Advisory Committee Act and established under the provisions of FIFRA, as amended by the Food Quality Protection Act of 1996. It provides scientific advice, information and recommendations to the EPA Administrator on pesticides and pesticide-related issues regarding the impact of regulatory decisions on health and the environment.
